Κάθαρσις, ιως, ἡ, a cleansing; a purgation or purification; expiation. In Aristotle's celebrated definition of Tragedy, the word κάθαρσις in the following expression, τῶν τοιούτων παθημάτων κάθαρσις, Poet. 6, has been variously explained by the commentators. It is commonly rendered in the Latin versions by purgatio, which also requires explanation, as well as the original; in English it is commonly rendered, the correction, refinement, or purification of such passions, that is, of pity and terror, and other passions of the same kind. The most recent illustration we have met with is a remarkable passage of Jamblichus de Mysteriis, sect. i, cap. ii, p. 22 (cited in E. H. Barker's Epist. Crit. subjoined to his edition of Arcadius de Accentibus, Lips. 1820,) which, as the editor observes, seems to be written with reference to Aristotle's expressions, and from which we extract the following: Διὰ τοῦτο ἐν τε κωμῳδίᾳ καὶ τραγῳδίᾳ ἀλλότρια πάθη θεωροῦντες, ἵστασθαι τὰ οἰκεῖα πάθη καὶ μετριώτερα ἀπεργαζόμεθα καὶ ἀποκαθαίρομεν, therefore, in comedy and tragedy, by contemplating the passions of others, we compose our own passions and make them moderate, and purify them; and this accords with the exposition of Aristotle given by Milton, in his introduction to Samson Agonistes, where he remarks, that Tragedy is said by Aristotle "to be of power by raising pity, and fear, or terror, to purge the minds of those and such like passions, that is, to temper and reduce them to just measure, with a kind of delight, by seeing those passions well imitated." Mr. Taylor, in his Translation of the Poetic, says, that by the expression "such like passions," Aristotle means not the passions of terror and pity, there mentioned, but those perturbations which form the catastrophe of the tragedy. Thus, in the Ajax of Sophocles, the terror and pity excited by the catastrophe purify the spectator from anger and impiety towards the gods, because through this anger and impiety those misfortunes happened to Ajax. This sense is considered by Dr. Coplestone as "no less just than ingenious," and is adopted by him as "the best which has ever been proposed"; although, as he observes, "a little difficulty still hangs about the word τοιούτων." Taylor's Translation, vol. i, Preface, Introduction, and p. 295.

ΚΑΙ', a copulative conjunction ; and, also ; even ; it serves to connect sentences and clauses of sentences, denoting an additional circumstance, or something added ; but all its significations may be included in those above given ; τε seems to bear a near affinity to it, and they are both frequently found in the same sentence or clause ; τε καὶ, this also, that, both, and also. It is frequently used with other particles, as in the following (alphabetical) list ; καὶ ἄν, s. as κἄν, and, if, although, even though, even if ; also, κἀν, for καὶ ἐν, Plut. Phæd. 78 ; — καὶ γάρ, for then ; καὶ γὰρ δή, καὶ γὰρ οὖν, καὶ γάρ τοι, and Poet. καὶ γὰρ ῥά, certainly then, for then ; — καί γε, and indeed, at least, however ; but a word or words always intervene, καὶ πέλας γ' ὁρᾷς, Soph. Phil. 1280 ; — καὶ ....δέ (in Homer, close together), and besides, in strengthening additions ; — καὶ δὴ καί, and also ; — καὶ δή, even now, this moment, accordingly, (and) now, yes indeed, καὶ δὴ μεθίημι, yes indeed I let go, Soph. Phil. 807 ; καὶ δὴ καί, and also indeed ; — καὶ εἰ, although, even though ; — καὶ ἓξ (ἑβδομήκοντα), about (seventy) ; — καὶ....καί, both....and, or, as well...as ; — καὶ μάλα γέ, most certainly, yes indeed ; — καὶ μέν, and indeed, yes indeed ; καὶ μὴν δή, and καὶ μὲν δὴ καί, but also, moreover, besides ; — καὶ μήν, and indeed, and truly, but yet ; (and) yet, (and) in truth, especially where a transition is made to something new, Xen. Mem. ii, 7, 1 ; comp. Odys xi, 581, 392 ; Soph. Œd. C. 549, 1249 ; καὶ μήν γε, and certainly, indeed, καὶ μὴν ἐμοῦ γε, Id. Phil. 656 καὶ μὴν καί, and farther, besides ; — καὶ πέρ, although, Id. Aj. 122 ; — "καὶ πῶς and πῶς καί have very different meanings ; καὶ πῶς is used in asking a question which implies an objection or contradiction to the preceding remark ; as, καὶ πῶς γένοιτ' ἂν τῶνδε δυσστομώτερα, where Creon's question is an implied affirmative, that the messenger's previous remark was not true ; but πῶς καί asks some additional information ; as, πῶς καὶ πέπρακται διπτύχων παίδων φόνος ; in this bitter sense καί follows the interrogatives τίς, πῶς, ποῖ, ποῦ, πόθεν. Sometimes, between the interrogative and καί, δέ is inserted." (Porson ad Phœn. 1373) ; — καὶ ῥα, and so, thus, Epic ; — καὶ τοί, but yet, and yet, but ; καὶ τοί γε, with other words always intervening ; as, καίτοι τοσοῦτόν γ' οἶδα, Soph. Œd. T. 1455 ; — καὶ ταῦτα, and that, and that being so, and considering that ; as, τὶ γὰρ δεινότερον δικαστοῦ, καὶ ταῦτα γέροντος, for what is worse than a judge, and that an old one, i. e. especially an old one ; καί, when ; ἥξουσι καὶ παραξαλοῦσι, Luke xix, 43, considered as a Hebraism by Grotius ad Matt. xv, 25, and Beza ad Marc. xv, 38 ; but it is used in the same manner by Hom. Odys. v. 262 ; τέταρτον ἦμαρ ἦην καὶ τῷ τετελέστατο ἅπαντα, it was the fourth day when all things were completed by him ; also, but ; as, καὶ οὐ πάντως τοῖς πόροις, 1 Cor. v, 10 ; καὶ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ ποιῶ οὐδέν, John viii, 28 ; καὶ οὐ μὴ τιμήσῃ τὸν πατέρα, Matt. xv, 5 ; it is redundant in Matt. xxviii, 9 ; Mark xiii, 54, etc. ; although ; as, καὶ μέγα δώῃ, although he may have given much, Hes. Op. 357 ; καὶ τὸ σμικρὸν ἐὸν, although it be small, Id. 360 ; also used for that is, as, κακῶς ἐπράττετο καὶ πένης ἦν, he did badly, that is, he was poor, Aristoph. Plut. The several meanings of καί may be resolved into two principal ones, and, also. When καί is repeated, it seems to be more emphatic than τε καί · πρὸς ταῦτα καὶ Κρέοντα καὶ τοὐμὸν στόμα προσκλάκιζε, Soph. Œd. T. 426. Καί is frequently used in the commencement of a speech, when a rapid transition is made ; κοὐδὲν γε θαῦμα, and no wonder, Id. Œd. T. 771, 1133 ; also, in interrogations, καὶ νῦν τί μ' ἀγεῖς ; Id. Phil. ; καὶ πῶς ὁρᾶται ....καὶ ταῦτ' ἐπαινεῖς, Id. Antig. 1089. The use of καὶ τε, instead of καί alone, is confined to Homer ; but καί....τε, with a word between, is found in the Attics, Thucyd. i, 9 ; καί is used with superlatives to strengthen the signification ; as, καὶ μάλιστα, in Lat. vel maxime, Xen. Cyr. ii, 1, 5 : καί is frequently put with οὗτος, as the Latin et is, isque, in the sense, and truly, indeed, Herodt. i, 147. Καί forms a crasis with all the vowels except iota and upsilon ; and also with all the diphthongs except αι.

Αὐτίκα δ' ἐξ ὄρεος κατεβήσετο παιπαλόεντος,
Κραιπνὰ ποσὶ προβιβάς· τρέμε δ' οὔρεα μακρὰ καὶ ὕλη
Ποσσὶν ὑπ' ἀθανάτοισι Ποσειδάωνος ἰόντος.

These forms are commonly said to come from the futures of their respective verbs, and are generally used with the time of an aorist. They seem rather to be the Ionic form of the aorist, and are inflected like a second aorist, which originally was, unquestionably, an imperfect. No past tense or aorist can be formed from a future, as the tenses have no relative connection." Dunb. Lex.

Κητώεις, ώσσα, ώεν, only found as an Homeric epithet of Lacedæmon, situated in a hollow, or abounding in hollows, gorges, or vales; οἱ δ' εἶχον κοίλην Λακεδαίμονα κητώσσαν, Il. ii, 581. See Buttmann's Lexil. § 70. Fr. κῆτος. "Buttmann's explanation of κητώσσα, having many chasms, appears to me very objectionable. I pass over the common one as utterly absurd. Homer very rarely employs two epithets, essentially the same in meaning, to distinguish the same object. But κοίλην and κητώσσαν, Il. ii, 581; Odys. iv, 1, according to Buttmann's interpretation, are nearly the same, the one signifying hollow, low-lying, and the other, having many chasms or hollows. Neither do I think that 'the common meaning of κῆτος' ever was a hollow or chasm. After some observations in support of his opinion, he says, 'κῆτος thus becomes the natural appellation of those large depths in the sea, frequented by whales, sharks, and such like. I have great doubts if Homer's knowledge of natural history extended so far, and also of But- mann's knowledge in this particular, especially in reference to the dolphin, which is described by Homer as μέγα κῆτος, Il. xxi, 22. The dolphin, however, is understood to sport generally on the surface of the sea, and not to frequent those depths alluded to by Buttmann. Homer evidently employed the word κῆτος to denote a fish of enormous size, or a sea-monster. None of its compounds or derivatives, therefore, so far as I know, have any reference whatever to chasms or hollows, but always to large fish ; and, of consequence, the fictitious word κητώσσαν cannot be applied as an epithet of Lacedæmon. I have little doubt that the true reading in the only two places where the epithet occurs should be κηώσσαν, fragrant, as characteristic of the fragrant flowers with which the district of Laconia is known to abound, particularly in the vale of the Eurotas." Dunbar. The concurring testimony of the manuscripts and all the scholiasts, however, seems to leave no room for the conjectural reading here proposed by Prof. Dunbar ; and the German scholars still follow the common reading, but hesitate between the two interpretations, abounding in hollows, and vast, huge, spacious ; both of which are given by the German lexicographers. The latest of these, Crusius, in his valuable Lexicon, exclusively adapted to the Homeric Greek, says, " abounding in hollows or gorges, because it [Lacedæmon] lies in a hollow, surrounded with mountains and narrow passes. Thus Buttmann, Lexil. ii, 79, and Nitzsch ; others, as Heyne, Voss, spacious, vast, huge, a definition less suited to fact." Prof. Smith's edit. of Crusius.

Λιπ', for λιπε, 3. sing. 2. a. ind. Ion. or 2. sing. 2. a. imperat. of λείπω. Also for Λῖπα, used by Homer, always with ἀλεῖψαι and ἀλείψασθαι (as in Il. x, 577, Odys. vi, 227, and Hes. Op. et Dies. 520), in the phrase λίπ' ἐλαίῳ, also, by Ionic and Attic prose writers, ἀλείφεσθαι and χρίεσθαι λίπα, to anoint or smear one's self with oil. According to Herodian, in Eustath. Odys. vi, 215, λίπα was an ancient dative λίπᾳ, from τὸ λίπα, gen. ατος, dat. λίπαϊ, λίπᾳ, oil, fatness, grease; and therefore some consider ἐλαίῳ, from ἐλάα, olive, as an adjective; λίπ' ἐλαίῳ, with olive oil, as opposed to στεαρ, animal fat or lard (see Buttm. Gram. by Robinson, and Kuhner's Gram. by Edwards and Taylor), as Servius explains Virgil's pinguis olivi by λιπέλαιον, Eclog. v, 68. According to others it is an indeclinable noun, like ὕφα, ἄλειφα, etc.; or a syncopated accusative from λίψ, gen. λιπός, dat. λίπι, acc. λίπα, used adverbially, to anoint one's self thickly with oil; and λίπα certainly appears as an accus. in Hippocr. 277, 39; it is used without the addition of ἐλαίῳ, in Odys. vi, 227, and also by later writers, as Thucyd. i, 6; iv, 68. It may be from λίπας, άδος, άδι, άϊ, contracted in λίπα, like βᾶ, βαΐ, from βαΐδι. Or, finally, it may be the neuter of an adj. λιπός. See Riemer's Lex. By Damm (and others, who follow the Scholiasts on Homer) λίπα is considered as being put, by apocope, for λίπαρα, and this neut. plur. used adverbially for λιπαρῶς, soft and sleek with oil; in which manner it began to be used also by the prose-writers; and he disregards the opinion of those who fancy a substantive λίπας for λίπος, and who suppose that λίπα is put by apocope for λίπασι. See also Thiersch's Gram. § 198, 2. Heyne says of this much disputed word, "I have always been of opinion that the original word was λίψ, λιπός, fatness. and that by ancient usage the substantive is put for an adjective, so that λίπα ἔλαιον, oil-brightness, is used for shining oil; and hence λιπὶ ἐλαίῳ, for fat, i. e. shining or glossy oil. It may be thought that the passage in Thucydides, λίπα γὰρ ἀλείψεσθαι, lib. i, 6, is inconsistent with this; but that is an Attic form, (κατὰ) λίπα, for λιπί." Heyne's Hom. Il. x, 577. Fr. λίπος. "The root is λείβω, λίβω, to pour what is liquid, hence, λίπος, any liquid substance." Damm.

Λοιμικός, ή, όν, pestilential, pertaining to the plague. From Λοιμοῖο, gen. Ion. of λοιμός.

ΛΟΙΜΟ'Σ, οῦ, ὁ, a plague, pestilence, Il. i, 61; by metaphor. a pestilent or mischievous fellow, Demosth. 794, 5; ἥξει Δωριακὸς πόλεμος καὶ λοιμὸς ἅμ' αὐτῷ, a Doric war shall come, and with it ε pestilence (or a famine, λιμός), Thucyd. ii, 54. This oracular verse could be interpreted in two ways, in consequence of the ambiguity arising from the resemblance of sound in the words λοιμός, a pestilence, and λιμός, a famine, both being pronounced, it is supposed, leemos. Hence, as Thucydides observes, a dispute arose, which of those two calamities was threatened by the oracle; as, however, the Athenians were at that moment suffering under a pestilence, they interpreted the oracle accordingly, λοιμός· but he adds, if another Doric war should happen, and be accompanied with a famine, they would probably adopt the other interpretation, λιμός, a famine. This passage of Thucydides is often cited, to prove that the Greek diphthong οι, even at that early period, was pronounced like the simple ι, just as it is by the Modern Greeks; and as the oracles were delivered orally, and not in writing, it affords strong evidence of this pronunciation; for if the two words were not sounded alike, there could have been no ambiguity, and no room for the dispute mentioned by the historian.

Λοιμοφόρος, ου, ὁ, ἡ, producing pestilence, pestilential. Fr. λοιμός and φέρω.

Λοιμώδης, εος, ὁ, ἡ, like the plague, pestilential, infectious, Thucyd. i, 23. Fr. εἶδος.

Μελανῦδρος, ου, ὁ, ἡ, having dark or black waters, ὥστε κρήνη μελάνυδρος, Il. ix, 14; epithet of a river or fountain. Fr. ὕδωρ.

ΜΕΛΑΣ, ᾶνος, ὁ, fem. μέλαινᾰ, ης, ἡ, neut. μέλαν, ᾶνος, black, dark, gloomy; obscure: profound; μέλας Ἄϊδης, gloomy Hades, Soph. Œd. T. 29: οἶνος μέλας, dark-colored, i. e. red wine, which is also called ἐρυθρὸς οἶνος, Anacr. 31; ναῦς μέλας is probably so called, not from its being pitched over, nor from the gloom of the hold, but simply from the dark look of all ships on the water; of the voice, indistinct; obscure, enigmatical; metaphorically, wicked, bad; gloomy; severe; μελαινάων ὀδυνάων, Il. xv, 394; deep, applied to water, Odys. iv, 358; cruel, Poet. μείλας. Μέλας seems originally to have been μέλανς, in the Æolic μέλαις, and hence, by changing μ into κ, κελαινός, having the same meaning. Compare ταλάς, the only word exactly like it in form. See Buttm. Lexil.

Μέλασμα, ατος, τό, a black color or spot; and Μελασμός, οῦ, ὁ, a blackening.

ΜΕΛΓΩ, the root of ἀμέλγω, whence the Lat. mulgeo, and Engl. milk.

Μέλδομαι, pres. mid. of μέλδω, to liquefy, to melt; to dissolve; to soften by water; μελδόμενος, running over with the fat, Il. xxi, 363. Hence Engl. TO MELT.

Μέλε, Epic 3. impf. of μέλω. But

Μέλε, ὦ μέλε, Aristoph. Nub. 1193, an Attic voc. sing. masc. and fem. from an obsol. nom., and used in no other case, my friend, my dear, my good Sir, Plat. Theæt. 178, E; my sweet girl, my dear madam, Aristoph. Lys. 56; my good dame, Id. 157, Eccles. 120. Prof. Dunbar observes, that "most lexicographers have confounded this adjective with μέλεος, which signifies wretched; but there is no affinity between the two. Besides, the voc. masc. of μέλεος is always μέλεος, never μέλε, Eurip. Orest. 90 and 169; Soph. Trach. 938, Phil. 705; μέλε is generally used as a term of endearment; sometimes, also, when dissent is expressed, as when we say, my good Sir, I do n't agree with you.... In Aristoph. Nub. 1193, it is supposed to be for μέλεε, but it is not so. See also Vesp. 1400. In Aristoph. Pac. 137, the reading in most editions is, ἀλλ' ὦ μέλε' ἄν μοι σιδίων δίπλῶν ἔδεσι, but it ought to be ἀλλ' ὦ μέλ' ἄν, etc. [as it is in Dindorf's edition.] In v. 376 the reading is ἀλλ' ὦ μέλε' ὑπὸ Διὸς ἀμαλδυνθήσομαι, μέλε' being supposed by apocope for μέλεε, a form never used.... When Aristophanes uses an expression equivalent to our word wretch, in a playful manner, it is always the adjective τάλας· he employs its neuter, τάλαν, even when addressing a woman; as, δεῦρ', ὦ γλυκύτη Πραξαγόρα, σκέψαι τάλαν, Eccles. 124; cf. Lysistr. 910, 914." Passow and other German lexicographers had previously treated it as derived from some other root than μέλεος, as it certainly occurs where the term wretch is wholly inapplicable, as in Plat. Theæt. 178, E; Buttmann refers it to the root μέλι. See μέλεος.

Theæt.* 161, E; Id. Menex. 82, B; its correlative is sometimes understood. Μέν was originally the sam. with μήν. The particles which are usually connected with it here follow, in alphabetical order: —

— Μὲν ἀλλά, indeed....but ; as, ἀνόσια μὲν δρῶν, ἀλλὰ τιμωρῶν πατρί, perpetrating wicked things, indeed, but avenging a parent, Eurip. Orest. 562.

— ἄρα, accordingly, and so, like μὲν δή, μὲν οὖν, μὲν τοίνυν · ὴν Il. μέν ῥα.

— ἀτάρ (instead of δὲ after μέν), ἀς, τὸ μὲν πλεῖον....χεῖρες ἐμαὶ διέπουσ' ἀτὰρ ἥν, my hands, indeed, perform the greater part ....but if, etc.

— αὖ, often used like δέ after μέν. See μὲν δέ.

— αὖθις, as, τοῦτο μέν....τοῦτ' αὖθις, in the first place....in the next place, Soph. Antig. 170.

— αὐτάρ (Epic form of ἀτάρ), as, οὐρῆας μὲν πρῶτον ἐπώχετο ....αὐτὰρ ἔπειτ' αὐτοῖσι, it first, indeed, attacked the mules (and dogs), but afterwards themselves, Il. i, 50.

— αὖτε, often used like δέ after μέν.

— γάρ, in which connection each particle retains its force, Soph. Œd. T. 62 ; μὲν γὰρ....δέ, for indeed....but, Acts xiii, 36.

— γε, or μὲν....γε, yet at least, certainly, when γε confirms something gone before ; γε μέν, though true, Il. ii, 703.

— δέ. See first remark under μέν.

— δη, at least, however ; also, then indeed, why then ; generally used much like μέν τοι.

— δῆτα, s. as δή, but more emphatic.

— νυν, for μὲν οὖν, particularly in Ion. prose.

— οὖν or μενοῦν, much like μὲν δή, in strong affirmations, aye indeed, nay rather, etc See μενοῦν.

— οὖν γε, or better, μενοῦνγε, in the beginning of a sentence like μὲν οὖν, but stronger, yes verily, yes certainly, Luke xi, 28.

— που, no doubt, most likely, of course ; somehow, however.

— τε. See above, — ἄρα.

— τἄρ, for μέντοι ἄν, does not alter the signification of μέντοι, as ἄν belongs to the verb ; it should not be written μέντ' ἄν, for οι is not cut off, but forms a crasis with ἄν.

— τε, like μὲν δή or μέν τοι in sense, you at least it befits, Il. iv, 341 ; but if δέ τι follows, μέν retains its usual force.

— τοι Hom., but in Att. as one word μέντοι, where μέν adds to the force of τοι, certainly, I am sure, etc.

— τοίνυν, like μὲν οὖν, frequent without δέ following.

ΜΕΤΑ' (μεθ' before an aspirated vowel), prep. governing the genitive, (dative with the Ionic and Doric poets, rarely with the Attic, unless in the choral odes,) and accusative, as in the following examples;

I. With the genitive; with, together with, sharing with; μετ' ἐμοῦ, with me; μετά τινος γίγνεσθαι, to be with one, i. e. of his party; τῶν μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ, of those who were with him, or of his soldiers; Σωκράτης.... τῶν μεθ' αὐτοῦ τινας ἔχων, Socrates having some of his disciples, Xen. Mem. iv, 2, 1: μετ' ἀρετῆς, through or by means of virtue; μετὰ τοῦ γυμνάζεσθαι, by taking exercise. It is often to be rendered in English adverbially; as, μετὰ χαρᾶς, joyfully, i. e. with joy; it sometimes means near; as, συγκατεσκίδασε τῷ μετ' αὐτοῦ τὸ κέρας, poured it upon those near him Xen. Anab. vii, 3, 16; sometimes it is to be rendered according to; as, μετὰ Πλάτωνος, according to Plato, i. e. with Plato's opinion; it is also used for ὑπό· as, μετὰ πνοιῆς ἀνέμοιο, by (or with) the blowing of the wind, Il. xxiii, 367.

II. With the dative, by the Ionic and Doric poets; between, among; μετὰ τριτάτοισιν, among or with those of the third generation, Il. i, 252; μετὰ σφίσιν, among themselves, Id. i, 368; μετὰ ποσσίν, between his feet; μετὰ χερσί, in his hands; it is also used for ἐν· as, μετὰ πᾶσιν Ἀργείοισι, among all the Argives, Il v, 2, and iv, 341; μετὰ φρέσι, in the mind; μετὰ στρατῷ, in the army; sometimes in the sense of after, as with the acc., Odys. ix, 369.

III. With the accusative; after, next to; during; on account of; as, μετὰ τὸν τοῦ παιδὸς θάνατον, after the death of the child; τὰ μετὰ ταῦτα, the things (which were done) after those things, Xen.; οἱ μετ' ἐκεῖνον βασιλεῖς, the kings after him, i. e. his successors, Id.; μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα, but afterwards, and afterwards; πόλιν τὴν πλουσιωτάτην.... μετὰ Βαβυλῶνα, the richest city next to (or after) Babylon, Xen. Cyr. viii, 2, 4: μεθ' ἡμέραν, during the day; μετὰ τὸν βίον, during life; μεθ' ἡμέρας δύο, two days after; μετ' ὀλίγον ὕστερον, a little after; μετὰ χρόνον, after some time, or some time after; also, in; as, μετὰ χεῖρας, in his hands, Thucyd. i, 138. It is also used with the accusative instead of ἐπί, εἰς, πρός, and διά· as, ὅς με μετ' ἀπρήκτους ἔριδας βάλλει, who throws me into (or amidst) vain contentions, Il. ii, 376; βῆ δὲ μετ' ἄλλους, and he went after the others, Id. iv, 292; μετὰ νῆας ἐλαύνειν, to drive to the ships, Id. v, 165; μετὰ δαῖτα, to the banquet, Id. i, 424; ἵππειον μέτα ἴχνια, for (after) the chariot-horses, Eurip. Alc. 67; it is often used for εἰς or διά· as, μετὰ κῶας, after, or for, or on account of, the (golden) fleece, Ap. Rhod. i, 4; μετὰ χαλκόν, for, or on account of, or in quest of brass, Odys. i, 184; ἣν σὺ νῦν ἥκεις μέτα, for whom you are come, Eurip. Alc. 46.

IV. It is also used alone, by the poets, and by Herodotus, as an adverb, for μετέπειτα, afterwards, after that, after.

V. In composition, it denotes with, i. e. sharing with, after, among, over; very often it implies a change from one situation to another, a change of mind, of opinion, etc.; alteration, transferring, or removing; as, μεταγιγνώσκειν, to change one's opinion, Isocr.; μετίγνων τὰ πρόσθ' εἰρημένα, I repent of what was formerly said, *Eurip. ΜΕΧΡΙ, or, before a vowel, μέχρις, adv. governing the gen.; in relation to place, as far as; in relation to time, until; μέχρις ἄν, as long as; μέχρις οὗ, as far as; μέχρις οὗ ἄν, until; μέχρι τίνος; how far? μέχρι τινός and τέο μέχρις, in some measure, and until what time? μέχρι τοῦδε, thus far; μέχρι τούτου.... ἵως προὔδωκεν Ὀλυνθον, thus far ....until he betrayed Olynthus, Demosth. 241, 23; μέχρι πόλλου, a long while; μέχρι ζωῆς, during life; μέχρι παντός, for ever; μέχρι οὗ and ἄχρι οὗ, with an infinitive, may be rendered even to, so that; as, μέχρι οὗ καὶ ἐπιδάκρυσαι, so that he wept for (him) or even to weeping for; (2) it is also joined with other adverbs; as, μέχρις ἐνταῦθα, thus far, hitherto; οὕτω μ.χρι πόρρω προήγαγον οὗτοι τὸ πρᾶγμα, to such a length had they carried matters, Dem. de Coron.; (3) when used with the genitive it sometimes includes and sometimes excludes the object expressed by the noun, as the words to and until, do in English; as, ἀγωνίκεσθαι μέχρι θανάτου, to fight even to death, i. e. including death; but in the saying of Pericles, that he would be a friend as far as the altar, μέχρι τοῦ βωμοῦ φίλος, the altar is excluded, because he did not mean to be a friend so far as to perjure himself, Hoogeveen de Partic. Græc. In the much controverted passage of Aristot. Poet., ἡ μὲν οὖν ἐπωποιΐα τῇ τραγῳδίᾳ μέχρι μόνου μίτρου μετὰ λόγου μίμησις εἶναι σπουδαίων ἠκολούθησεν, c. 5, (c. 12, ed. Tyrwhitt,) some commentators give μέχρι the sense of excluding or excepting; but the most satisfactory explanation appears to be that of the recent editor, Græfenhan, who says, in substance, that the word μέχρι is used figuratively, as it were, to correspond with the verb ἠκολούθησε, and this again is used to answer to μεταβάσεις, which occurs just before; the meaning of the passage then will be, that Epic poetry did not arrive at the same degree of perfection, and had not so many successive transitions or advances (μεταβάσεις) as dramatic composition; it, indeed, added metre to the composition; but it could follow the footsteps of tragedy only as far as metre; in the use of metre, however, as well as in the species of composition, it differs from tragedy, etc. This editor adds, contrary to the common opinion, that μέχρι nowhere implies exclusion. Aristot. Poet. ed. Græfenhan, cap. v, p. 65. Ἄχρι, or ἄχρις, the same, which see.

ΜΗ, a negative and conditional particle, used as a conjunction and adverb, in forbidding or entreating, and may be rendered by not, no, not at all; unless, lest, etc. Its appropriate use is to forbid, like the Latin particle ne; μὴ τύπτε, do not strike; if an aorist, μὴ τύψῃς· μή σε, γέρον, ...κιχείω, old man, let me not find thee, Il. i, 26. It is used, (1) with the indicative pf., aor., and fut.; as, νῦν δὲ φοβούμεθα μὴ ἁμφοτέρων ἡμαρτήκαμεν, but now we fear lest we have failed in both, Thucyd. iii, 53; δείδω μὴ δὴ πάντα θεὰ νημερτέα εἴπεν, I fear lest the goddess may have spoken all things true, Odys. v, 300; βλέπετε μή τις ἔσται, see lest there be any one, Coloss. ii, 8; as a negative adverb, in relative propositions it is construed with the indicative present; as, ἐφ' οἷς γὰρ μὴ φρονῶ, σιγᾶν φιλῶ, Soph. Œd. T. 569. (2) With the imperative present; as, μὴ οἴου δεῖν ἡμᾶς, do not think that we ought, Plat. Polit. iii, 414, C; μὴ λεγ', ὦ τέκνον, τάδε, do not speak thus, my son, Soph. Phil. 886. (3) With the optative, after a verb denoting past time; as, περιδείσασα μὴ μὶν ἀποέρσειε ποταμός, fearing lest the river should overwhelm or swallow him up, Il. xxi, 329, in which case ἄν seems to be understood; it is also construed with the optative, when a wish or prayer is expressed; as, μὴ νῦν ὀναίμην, may I not prosper, Soph. Œd. T. 644; ὄλοιο μή πω, I do not wish your death, Id. Phil. 949; the particle μή, giving the sense of the imperative, accompanies the first or second aorists subjunctive, and the present imperative, but never the present subj. or 2. aor. imperative. There are some few instances of μή with the first aor. imperative. (Porson Hec. 1116.) With the optative generally in oblique expressions, or when preceded by another optative; as, τὴν Κορινθίαν....χθόνα ἔφευγον, ἔνθα μή ποτ' ὀψίμην κακῶν χρησμῶν ὀνείδη, Soph. Œd. T. 796; see Trach. 1225. (4) With the subjunctive 1. and 2. aorists, after verbs denoting present or future time; as, βλέπετε μή τις ὑμᾶς πλανήσῃ, see that no one deceives you, Mark xiii, 5; μὴ εἴπῃς, say not, i. e. see or take care that you do not say, the verb φυλάσσου being understood; ὀκνῶ μὴ μάταιος γένηται, I fear lest it should be fruitless, Dem. Olynth. i; when an imperative precedes, μή is construed with the aorists of the subjunctive; it is construed with the subjunctive of verbs denoting a prohibition or caution; as, μὴ μ' ἀφῇς ἐρῆμον, do not leave me deserted, Soph. Phil. 484; also when some reason is assigned why a thing ought not to be done; as, μὴ μ' ὄκνῳ δείσαντες ἐκπλάγητε, Id. 225. (5) With the infinitive, the verb δεῖ or εὐλαβοῦ δείσῃ understood; as, μὴ ἀπορρίπτεσθαι, we must not wander or go beyond bounds, Antonin. iv, 14. (6) With a participle; as, πᾶν δένδρον μὴ ποιοῦν, every tree that doth not bring forth, or not bringing forth, Matth. xiii, 19. (7) After several kinds of verbs; as those which signify to beware, take heed, prohibit, command, fear, wish; as, ὁράτε μὴ καταφρονήσητε, see that ye do not despise; κατεῖχεν μὴ πορευτέον εἶναι, prevented him from going; φοβοῦμαι μὴ ταπεινώσῃ, I fear lest he should humble me; μὴ γένοιτο, may it not happen, God forbid that it should happen. (8) It is also used with various particles; as, in the following examples (alphabetically arranged) as, εἰ δὲ μήγε, but if otherwise, if it should not happen otherwise; εἰ μή, unless; μὴ γάρ, μὴ γὰρ δή, μὴ δῆτα, lest it should happen, let it not happen that; μὴ καί refers to two incidents, μὴ καὶ....ἀκούσαντες ψηφίσησθε.... καὶ ἐκφύγῃ τὰ πράγματα αὐτόν, Dem. de Coron. in Coll. Maj. iii, 87; μὴ ὅτι and μὴ ὅπως, not only, not even; μὴ μή, s. as μή, but more forcible; μὴ μήν, no certainly, no indeed; μὴ οὐ, μὴ οὐκ, not, lest not, commonly after verbs denoting fear; πῇ δὲ καὶ ἐφοβεῖτο μὴ οὐ δύναιτο ἐκ τῆς χώρας ἐξελθεῖν τῆς βασιλέως, Xen. Anab. iii, 1, 9; μὴ νύ τοι οὐ χραίσμῃ σκῆπτρον, lest indeed the sceptre do not avail thee, Il. i, 28; unless; ὅπως μὴ πίσῃς, that you may not fall, φυλάσσου or some such verb understood; ὅσον μή, almost; ὅτι μή, unless, beside; οὐ μή, not at all, expressing an absolute negative. (9) With 1. a. subj., Soph. Aj. 1108; also with fut. ind., ὅπως τοῦτο μὴ πεισόμεθα, that we may not suffer this, Dem. c. Leptin.; φυλάσσου, ὅρα, or some such verb being understood. (10) It is also used as a mere sign of an interrogation; as, μὴ οἴει, do you think? μὴ οὐκ ἤκουσαν, have they not heard? μὴ οὐκ ἔχομεν, have we not? (11) Μή is rarely used instead of οὐ, in direct enunciation; as, μη γω νόη μη κομψότερον ἤκουσα, Aristoph. Av.; μὴ ἀδικία παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ, can there be injustice with God? Rom. ix, 14. (12) The distinction between μή and οὐ is, that the latter is a direct negative, not, no; but μή is used with conjunctions, such as ἐάν, εἰ, ἵνα, etc., like ne in Latin, in forbidding, entreating, preventing, etc. Μή, in composition, or joined with other particles, as, μὴ γάρ, μὴ οὐ, etc., will be found in alphabetical order, as follows:

Conv.* 197, A; equivalent to who will controvert or deny, etc. With a participle, οὐ γὰρ ἂν μακρὰν ἴχνευον αὐτός, μὴ οὐκ ἔχων σύμβολον, for I myself could not prosecute the investigation far, having no clue to guide me, Soph. Œd. T. 221; Œd. C. 361. The negative in the following sentence is included in the adjective δυσάλγητος, Soph. Œd. T. 13; δυσάλγητος γὰρ ἂν εἴην τοιάνδε μὴ οὐ κατοικτίρων ἕδραν, for I should be hard-hearted indeed, i. e. I should have no feelings of compassion. With verbs denoting fear, caution, doubt, etc., οὐ retains its absolute negative power, with subj.; as, δείδοικα μὴ οὐ θάνῃ, I fear lest he should not die; the omission of the absolute negative renders the expression conditional, δείδοικα μὴ θάνῃ, I fear lest he should die; δεδίως περὶ αὐτοῦ μὴ διαφθαρῇ, Plat. Polit. ii, 367, A; with the indicative present denoting a kind of suspicion, ἀλλ᾽ ὅρα ....μὴ οὐχ οὕτω ταῦτ᾽ ἔχει, but see lest this be not so, Plat. Alc. ii, 139, D; without the absolute negative, ἀλλ᾽ ὅρα μὴ παίζων ἐλεγχθῇς, but see (beware) lest he spoke in jest, Plat. Theæt. 145, B; μὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ὅπως μὴ οὐ ποιεῖν τοῦτο, I cannot but do this; I must do this; μή sometimes refers to a preceding negative expression, and, with οὐ, qualifies the verb following, making the expression conditional, Il. i, 26. There is a singular use of these two negatives in Il xv, 164, μή μ᾽ οὐδὲ, κρατερός περ ἐών, ἐπιόντα ταλάσσῃ Μεῖναι. The words in all the editions are incorrectly pointed, and hence convey a very inadequate idea of the force of the expression; they should be pointed and rendered in the following manner:

Μή μ᾽, οὐδὲ, κρατερός περ ἐών,
ἐπιόντα ταλάσσῃ
Μεῖναι,

let him not dare, no, strong though he be, to await my attack; μή qualifies the verb ταλάσσῃ, and οὐδέ, referring to κρατερός περ ἐών, makes the expression more absolute, no, he must not, strong though he be;

one sagacious critic says, οὐ belongs to the participle ἐπιόντα! there is an abruptness in the language, natural in one highly exasperated, and withal the elder born, and the chief of the gods. Dunb. Lex.

Νῶϊ, νώ, nom. and acc. dual, and νῶΐν, νῷν, gen. and dat. dual to ἐγώ, we two, us two, and of us two, to us two. The shorter Attic form (according to Passow) is νώ, not νῷ or νῶ· νῶϊ is never found as gen. or dat., nor νῶΐν as nom. or acc. (Buttm. Lexil. 7). The ι of νῶϊ seems to have been a substitution for ς, which is preserved in the Latin nos; according to this, νῶϊ must have been originally used as a plural, and became afterwards confined to the dual, when ἡμεῖς was generally used in the plural. It is remarkable that the present Italian noi is the old Greek word unchanged. See Buttmann's Lexil. § 82. The theory of Buttmann, that a dual is not among the earliest necessities of a language, but is a mere chance modification of the plural, is, however, opposed by the fact, that many unwritten languages (as those of America) have a proper dual.

Ξύω, s. as ξίω, f. ύσω, to shave, scrape, smooth : to polish ; ὅν οἱ Ἀθήνη ἴξυσ' ἀσκήσασα, which Minerva finished off with great care, Il. xiv, 179 ; to sweep, Odys. xxii, 456 ; also, to carve in any substance ; mid. to polish for one's self ; also, metaphor. to fret one's self ; pf. pas. ἴξυσμαι.

O

O O O

O is the fifteenth letter of the Greek alphabet, and is called ὁ μικρόν, omicron, to distinguish it from ὦ μέγα. As a numeral it denotes seventy, and, with a mark underneath (ο,) seventy thousand. In the earliest periods it was called οὖ, not ὁ μικρόν, as the short ε was called εἶ, according to the analogy of all the monosyllabic names for letters, which are long. In the Doric dialect, ο is changed into ε, in the Æolic, into υ · thus, Ἀπίλλων, for Ἀπόλλων · ὄνυμα, for ὄνομα. In the Æolic dialect, ο seems often to have been used instead of α and ε, as in the 2. pf. of verbs ; thus, μίμονα from μίνω, ἴστολα from στίλλω, στρότός for στρατός · but this is rare.

Ὁ, with a rough breathing alone, is the definite article the ; but with a rough breathing and accent, ὅ, it is the neuter of the relative ὅς, ἥ, ὅ, who, which.

Ο, ή, τό, the definite article, the ; also used for the demonstrative pronouns this, that, he, she, it, and the relatives who, which, that, by Homer in particular, who employed it chiefly as a demonstrative pronoun, which appears to have been its original use. The principal uses and modes of rendering it in English may be seen in the following examples :

I. With nouns it is used like the English article the, to designate the particular person or thing spoken of or referred to, in contradistinction to other individuals of the same class ; as, ὁ ἄνθρωπος, the man ; ἡ γυνή, the woman ; τὸ πρᾶγμα, the thing. In this use of the article it is (1) prefixed to a substantive, or to an adjective having its substantive understood, when such subst. or adj. is the subject, or nominative, of the verb, expressed or understood ; as, ἡ ἡδονὴ εὐδαιμονία, pleasure is happiness ; ἡδονὴ ἡ εὐδαιμονία, happiness is pleasure ; (2) but sometimes it is omitted before the subject or nominative of the verb, and used with the predicate of the proposition ; as, εἰρήνη ἐστι τἀγαθόν (τὸ ἀγαθόν), peace is the (abstract) good ; and (3) sometimes it is used with both the subject and predicate ; as, ὁ δὲ Κύριος τὸ πνεῦμά ἐστιν, the Lord is the spirit, or that spirit, 2 Cor. iii, 17 ; τουτὶ τὸ κράνιον ἡ Ἑλένη ἐστίν, this skull is the Helen (whom you seek), Lucian's Dial. xviii. (4) It is also used with names of persons and places, but in such instances it does not admit of being rendered into English ; as, ὁ Ἰωάννης, John, ἡ Ἰουδαία, Judea. (5) With the name of a person in the genitive, the article denotes the son, daughter, or child of such a person, the words παῖς, υἱός, etc., being understood ; as, ὁ Καμβύσου, the son of Cambyses ; ἡ Ταντάλου, the daughter of Tantalus ; but sometimes in similar cases the article is understood ; as, Στρομβιχίδης Διοτίμου, Strombichides, the son of Diotimus, Thucyd. (6) The article in the neuter gender, whether singular or plural, when followed by a noun in the genitive case, is taken with it in the sense of such noun ; as, τὰ τῆς τύχης, fortune, i. e. the things of fortune ; τὸ τῆς εἰρήνης, i. e. ἡ εἰρήνη, peace ; τὸ τῶν ἀνδρῶν, i. e. οἱ ἄνδρες, the men ; and in other genders also the article is used with a genitive to signify such persons or things as belong or relate to another person or thing ; as, οἱ Ξέρξεω, the soldiers of Xerxes, Herodt. ix, 69 ; οἱ Πιττάλου, the disciples or followers of Pittalus, Aristoph. Acharn. 1051. (7) The neuter article is often put before an entire sentence, which is to be taken as its substantive, such as quotations from authors, and proverbial or other well known sayings, and then it is demonstrative; as, τὸ γνῶθι σεαυτόν, the (saying of) know thyself; τὸ τοῦ Ὁμήρου, the passage or observation of Homer ; τὸ τοῦ Σόλωνος, the saying of Solon, Herodt. i, 86. It is also used before any word which is itself the subject of discussion, or is taken materialiter, as the grammarians term it; as, τὸ Ἄγαρ· τὸ λόγος, the word Ἄγαρ· τὸ λόγος, the word λόγος. And when such word is spoken of, merely as a part of speech, the article agrees in gender with the Greek name of such part of speech; as, ἡ ἐγώ, i. e. ἡ ἀντωνυμία ἐγώ, the pronoun ἐγώ· ὁ ἐστί, i. e. ὁ σύνδεσμος ἐστί, the conjunction ἐστί· λείπει ἡ εἰς, there is wanting the (preposition, πρόσθεσις) εἰς, Schol. Aristoph. Nub. 1087. (8) With feminine nouns in the dual number the article is often put in the masculine gender; as, τὼ χεῖρε, the hands, Xen. Mem. ii, 3, 18 ; τὼ γυναῖκε, the women, Xen. Cyr. v, 5, 2 ; and sometimes the article is put only once to two words of different genders; as, τὸν ὁμοκέλευθον καὶ ὁμόκοιτιν, for τὴν ὁμόκοιτιν, Plat. Cratyl. (9) The article frequently stands alone in a sentence, its noun being understood; as, ἐς τὴν ἑωυτῶν, to their own country or territory, γῆν being understood, Herodt. vi, 15 ; κατὰ δὲ τὴν ἐμὴν (γνώμην understood), according to my opinion, Plat. Phil. ; ἡ αὔριον (ἡμέρα understood), to-morrow, i. e. the day of to-morrow. In like manner the article is used in the common forms of oaths or asseverations, μὰ τόν, ὰὰ τήν, and νὴ τόν, when the name of the god or goddess sworn by is omitted through reverence, or being well known.

II. (10) When used with possessive or other pronouns, it is not expressed in English; as, ὁ ἐμός, mine ; ὁ σὸς υἱός, thy son, meaning one particular son ; as, υἱός σου, without the article, means any one of thy sons. (11) With the demonstratives, οὗτος, ὅδε, ἐκεῖνος, the article makes a stronger or more emphatic designation of the object mentioned; as, οἱ Γαλιλαῖοι οὗτοι, these Galileans, Luke xiii, 2 ; ἐκ τῶν χωρίων τουτέων, from those territories, Herodt. vi, 45. (12) With the interrogatives ποῖος and τίς, it implies a reference to something which has preceded; as, τὰ ποῖα ταῦτα, what are those things, i. e. to which you refer, Eurip. Phœn. 713. (13) By Aristotle, τὸ τί, substance, as distinguished from form, or other accident of matter. (14) The possessive pronouns are also put with the article instead of the personal pronouns ; as, τὸ ὑμέτερον, for ὑμεῖς, Herodt. viii, 140 ; τἀμά, for ἐγώ, Eurip. Androm. 235 ; τὸ ἐμόν, for ἐμέ, Plat.

III. (15) When used with adjectives, particularly neuters in the singular or plural, it gives them the force of substantives; as, οἱ θνητοί, mortals, or the mortals ; τὸ πιστόν, for ἡ πίστις, confidence, Thucyd. ; τὸ πρόθυμον, for ἡ προθυμία, zeal or interest for a friend, Eurip. Med. 179 ; τὰ διάφορα, for ἡ διαφορά, the difference ; τὸ τί, the substance ; τὸ ποῖον, the quality ; τὸ πόσον, the quantity, Aristot. ; τὸ καλόν, the abstract quality beauty. (16) Adjectives ending in ικος are also used alone in the neuter gender with the article ; first, in the singular, when a number of persons or things are spoken of as a whole, or collectively ; as, τὸ πολιτικόν, the citizens, considered as one body, Herodt. vii, 103 ; τὸ βαρβαρικόν, the barbarians ; secondly, in the plural; thus, τὰ Τρωϊκά, the Trojan war, literally, the Trojan affairs, Thucyd. i, 3 ; τὰ Ἑλληνικά, the Grecian history. But substantives in ικη are more commonly to be used without the article. (17) The article is also used, in the accusative feminine with adjectives, adverbially ; as, τὴν ταχίστην, for τάχιστα, very speedily, most speedily, or with the utmost speed possible, the substantive βάδισις or ὁδός, probably, being understood ; τὴν πρώτην, at first ; and also in the neuter gender ; as, τὸ πρῶτον, at first ; τὸ πολύ, for the most part.

IV. (18) With verbs in the infinitive mood, the article may be used in all its cases, in the singular number and neuter gender; and it gives to the verb the signification of a substantive ; as, τὸ ζῆν, life, i. e. living ; τὸ εἶναι, existence or being ; ἐκ τοῦ ὁρᾶν ἐστὶ τὸ ἐρᾶν, from sight (or seeing) comes love (or loving) ; μικροῦ δεῖν ὅμοιόν ἐστι τῷ ὀνειδίζειν, is almost similar to reproach or reproaching, Dem. de Coron. p. 316, ed. Reiske ; ἐπὶ τῷ χρῆσθαι, for use, or for the purpose of being used ; πρὸς τὸ μετρίων δεῖσθαι πεπαιδευμένος, disciplined or taught to want (or desire) with moderation, Xen. Mem. i, 2, 1 ; διὰ τὸ ξένος εἶναι, because you are a stranger, Id. ii, 1, 15.

V. (19) When the article is used with participles, they are to be rendered as substantives, or the article becomes equivalent to the indefinite pronoun τίς · as, ὁ σπείρων, a sower, i. e. any sower, literally, he who sows ; οἱ κολακεύοντες, for οἱ κόλακες, flatterers. The neuter of participles, like the neuter of adjectives, is often used in a collective sense ; as, τὸ ὑπόμενον ἐν Σπάρτῃ, for τοὺς ὑπομένοντας, those who remained, or, literally, what remained in Sparta, Herodt. vii, 209. If, however, the article is connected with nouns or pronouns, it has the sense of a relative ; as, ὑμεῖς οἱ λαλοῦντες, you who speak or are speaking, Matt. x, 20.

VI. (20) When joined to adverbs, the article gives them the sense of adjectives ; as, ὁ ἐγγύς, he who is near, ὤν being understood ; ὁ πάλαι, the old man, γεγονώς being understood ; ἡ ἄνω πόλις, the upper city ; οἱ τότε ἄνθρωποι, or οἱ τότε, the men of that time ; οἱ νῦν, these (men) of the present day ; οἱ πάνυ τῶν στρατιωτῶν, the best soldiers ; ἡ σήμερον, this day. The article in the accusative neuter is frequently joined to adverbs in the sense of adverbs ; as, τὸ πάλαι, of old ; τὸ νῦν, now ; τὸ πρῶτον, and τὰ πρῶτα, at first ; τὸ πρίν, formerly ; τὸ αὐτίκα, immediately ; τὸ πάμπαν, entirely.

VII. (21) To prepositions accompanied by their nouns, the article also gives the force of adjectives ; as, τὰ εἰς τὸν πόλεμον, i. e. τὰ πολεμικά, warlike things, or things relating to war ; οἱ καθ' ἡμᾶς, our contemporaries, τὰ πρὸς ἡμᾶς, our affairs, our interests, Demosth., καὶ τὰ πρὸς ἡμᾶς (ὑμᾶς) ἴχειν ἐν εὐνοίᾳ. (22) The nom. pl. masculine of the article, with the prepositions ἀμφί or περί, and a proper name, is rendered in three different ways; first, it designates the person named and his companions or attendants; as, οἱ ἀμφὶ Πεισίστρατον, Pisistratus with his troops, Herodt. i, 62; οἱ περὶ Θρασύβουλον, Thrasybūlus with his soldiers, Thucyd. viii, 105; secondly, it signifies the person alone who is named; as, οἱ δ' ἀμφὶ Πρίαμον καὶ Πάνθοον ἠδὲ Θυμοίτην, but Priam and Panthous and Thymœtas, Il. iii, 146; thirdly, it denotes the companions of the person named; as, οἱ περὶ αὐτόν, they that were about him, Mark iv, 10; οἱ περὶ Ἀρχίδαμον, the companions of Archidamus, Xen. Hist. Græc. vii, 5, 12. These constructions must be distinguished from those where the preposition is not followed by a proper name; as, οἱ περὶ φιλοσοφίαν, those who study (or are conversant about) philosophy; οἱ περὶ τὴν θήραν, the hunters. (23) The neuter article is also frequently put with prepositions accompanied by their cases in the sense of adverbs; as, τὸ ἀπὸ τοῦδε, after this, Soph. Aj. 1376; τὸ πρὸ τούτου, before this, Thucyd. ii, 15; τὸ ἐπ' ἐμὲ, or τοὐπ' ἐμὲ, τοὐπί σε, as much as lies in me or in you. With prepositions of time; as, ἐκ τοῦ, ever since; ἐν τῷ, whilst.

VIII. (24) The article is also used, particularly by the poets, for αὐτός, ἐκεῖνος, or οὗτος, he, this, that; as in Soph. Œd. T. 1055, γύναι, νοεῖς, ἐκεῖνον ὄντιν' ἀρτίως μολεῖν ἐφιεμίσθα, τὸν θ' οὗτος λέγει, ...the person whom he mentions; τῇ δέ, for ταύτῃ, and in this or the like manner, Longin. 7.

IX. (25) It is also used by the more ancient writers and the Ionians for the relative ὅς, and in the genitive τοῦ for οὗ, whose, of whom; as in Il. xiii, 211, 644; xv, 291; xviii, 460; and xxi, 59.

X. (26) The article is also used with μέν and δέ, distributively, and may then be rendered, the one and the other, this and that, the former and the latter; in which construction ὁ μέν commonly refers to the latter or nearer of two things, and ὁ δέ to the former or more remote of them; but sometimes ὁ μέν refers to the former, and ὁ δέ to the latter. Sometimes ὁ μέν and ὁ δέ are used in speaking of one thing alone, when it is considered in different relations, and in such instances they may each be rendered, partly or in part.

XI. (27) The oblique cases of the article are often used absolutely as demonstrative pronouns; as in the dative masculine, τῷ, for this reason, therefore, Il. ii, 254, ἐπί, perhaps, being understood; and sometimes it may be rendered then, in that case, as in Il. iv, 290. In the dat. fem. τῇ or τῇδε may be rendered here or there, the noun ὁδῷ being understood; τῇ μέν and τῇ δέ, on the one hand and on the other, Eurip. Orest. 350; τό, on this account, occurs only in Homer, Il. xvii, 404.

XII. Του and τῳ, without the accent, are frequently used as τινός and τινί· thus, εἶπε του θεῶν, Soph. Œd. T. 42, 396, etc.; ἐναυλίζοντι τῳ, Soph. Phil. 33; κακῷ δέ τῳ, Id. 731; τύχη γέ τῳ, Œd. T. 80; also with the accent for the interrogative τίς; as, τοῦ χάριν, Soph. Phil. 1018; πρὸς τοῦ διδαχθείς; by whom instructed? Id. Œd. T. 357; τοῦ παρ' ἀνθρώπων μαθών, Id. Trach. 741; τῷ γὰρ ἂν καὶ μείζονι λίξαιμ' ἂν ἢ σοι, Id. Œd T. 772. Cf. Œd. C. 1472; Antig. 397. See Weller's Gr. Gram. and Fischer's Animadvers.; Hoogeveen de Partic. Græc.; Matthiæ's Gr. Gram.; Ellendt's Lex. Sophocl.

"Ος, ἥ, ὅ, pron. relat., who, which, that. Its antecedent is very often understood, particularly when it is neuter. The Ionic writers, as Homer and Herodotus, often use the article instead of it; the Attic never but with a participle. It sometimes both precedes and follows a demonstrative, Soph. Phil. 86. The article, with the Ionic writers, is sometimes used in a similar construction; as, τήνδ' ὧν μεγίστην ... δαίμονα ἤγνηται εἶναι, καὶ μεγίστην οἱ ὁρτὴν ἀνάγουσι, ταύτην ἔρχομαι ἐρέων, but I am now going to declare the goddess whom they esteem the greatest, and to whom they perform the greatest festival, Herodt. ii, 40. It agrees with its antecedent, not only in gender and number, but frequently also in case, Il. x, 32; it is often joined with particles; as, ὅσδε, ὅσπερ, ὅστις, ὅσκε· it is sometimes used for οὗτος or ἐκεῖνος· also for εἴτις, Il. xiv, 81; sometimes also for ἑός, his, hers, its, as in Odys. i, 59, etc.; and also for mine, thine, Ap. Rhod. iv, 1015; Odys. i, 402: in the expression, ἦ δ' ὅς, ἦ δ' ἥ, said he, said she, it stands for οὗτος or ὅδε, etc.; but ὅς in this sense ought to be considered the personal pronoun, 3. pers.; ὅς μὲν ....ὅς δέ, and, in like manner, ὁ μέν, ὁ δέ, the one, the other; ὅς καὶ ὅς, this and that one, Herodt. iv, 88; by the poets, ὅ for διό, wherefore; ὅ is also used by Homer, Il. i, 120, in the same sense as ὅτι· ὅς ἄν, whosoever; ἐξ οὗ, because, on which account, Xen. Anab. vi, 6, 8; ἐξ ὧν, for which reason, Xen. Mem. i, 2, 3; οὗ, where, Xen. Anab. ii, 1, 5; ἀφ' οὗ, after, Soph. Œd. T. 758. Dunb.

"Ος, ἥ, ὄν (never ὅ), his, hers, its; from οὗ, of himself, used chiefly by the Epic poets, Il. x, 32.

Παρ', or πάρ, by apocop. Poet. for παρά· in poetry it frequently stands for πάρειστι, and has then the accent thrown back, αἰάζειν πάρα, Soph. Aj. 880; πάρα στενάζειν, Id. 961. "The old poets, as well as the Dorians (Gregor. 92, 116), omit the α in παρά, ἀνά, before a consonant, e. gr. πὰρ Ζηνί, Il. iv, 1; ἂν στόμα, Odys. v, 456 (comp. s. 38, Obs.), but the apostrophus is not employed." Matth. Gr. Gram. § 44.

ΠΑΡΑ', prep., governing the genitive, dative, and accusative, as follows:

I. With the genitive, from the side, generally, motion from along side of, from; ἦ γὰρ παρ' ἄλλου μ' ἔλαβες, pray did you receive me from any other? Soph. Œd. T. 1039; μαθὼν ἄλλου πάρα (with the accent thrown back, when placed after its noun), Id. 704; with verbs active and neuter, especially those to hear, learn, announce, etc., and with animated beings. μαθεῖν or ἀγγέλλειν παρά τινος· παρ' ἑαυτοῦ διδόναι, Herodt. ii, 129; vii, 29; viii, 5; to give something from his own substance, share of booty, Wessel. ad Herodt. 621, 56; παρὰ μηροῦ, from his thigh, Il.; παρ' αὐτῶν, of them, Matt. ii, 4; παρὰ τούτου, of him, Xen. Cyr. i, 3, 18; παρὰ τῶν σοφῶν, by or among the poets, Anacr. liii, 23.

II. With the dative, beside, close beside, Il. xiii, 176; Id. i, 358; at, to the question 'where?' Odys. i, 154; seldom put thus to the question 'whither?' Xen. Anab. ii, 5, 27; παρὰ Τισσαφέρνει, to or beside Tissaphernes; among, Odys. i, 154; παρ' ἐμοί, in my opinion; ὡς τὰ παρ' ἡμῖν, for us, or considering he is one of us.

III. With the accusative, it signifies motion to, so as to come beside, but never so as to form an integral part of the object; παρὰ νῆας, towards the ships, Il. i, 347; τῆς παρ' ἐμὲ εἰσόδου, the access to me, Xen. Cyr. i, 3, 12; παρὰ γῆν, along the shore or river, Il. i, 34; motion by or past any place; παρὰ τὴν Βαβυλῶνα παριέναι, Xen. Cyr. 5, 2, 29; it is frequently put thus to the question 'where?' Odys. xii, 32; comp. iii, 460; iv, 333; it sometimes denotes comparison, i. e. the placing one object beside another so as to compare them; παρὰ τὰ ἄλλα ζῶα, compared with other animals, Xen. Mem. i, 4, 14; see Plat. Phædr. 276, E; during, throughout; παρ' ὅλον τὸν βίον, through one's whole life, Herodt. vii, 46; especially when a definite point of time is expressed, Herodt. ii, 124; παρὰ τὴν πόσιν, in time of drinking, Demosth. 229, 159; παρ' αὐτὰ τὰ ἀδικήματα, at the very moment of the unjust transaction, while the facts were recent, Dem. de Coron.; against, contrary to, otherwise than; παρὰ δόξαν, contrary to expectation; παρὰ φύσιν, contrary to nature; παρὰ τὸ δίκαιον· παρὰ ἃ νῦν μανθάνουσιν, differently from the present mode of learning it, Plat. Polit. vii, 529, E; ἢ κατὰ γράμματα, ἢ παρὰ γράμματα, Id. Polit. 296, D; παρὰ τὰ ἰωθότα, contrary to custom, Plat. Hipp. Maj.; παρὰ τὰς σπονδάς, contrary to the treaty, Thucyd. i, 67; παρ' ἔλαττον τοῦ δέοντος ἡγεῖσθαι, to form a lower estimate than proper, Plat. Polit. viii, 546, D; παρ' ὀλίγον ποιεῖσθαι, to make nothing of, to despise; παρὰ τοσοῦτον γιγνώσκω, as far as I know, Thucyd. vi, 37; also after comparatives for ἢ, Thucyd. i, 23 (see s. 455), and after ἄλλος, Plat. Phædr. 211. Hence, Plat. Apol. S. p. 66, Ἀχιλλεὺς τοσοῦτον τοῦ κινδύνου κατεφρόνησε παρὰ τὸ αἰσχρόν τι ὑπομεῖναι, ὥστε, rather than commit any disgraceful thing; besides, οὐκ ἔστι παρὰ ταῦτ' ἄλλα, Aristoph. Nub. 698.

IV. In certain phrases as follows: παρὰ πολὺ, μικρὸν, ὀλίγον, especially with the verbs ἔρχεσθαι, ἥκειν, have also a negative sense it wants much, little of, Isocr Ægin. 388; Thucyd. iii, 49 vi, 37; Plat. Apol. § 25; παρ' οὐδὲν μὲν ἦλθον ἀποκτεῖναι, they were on the point of putting him to death, Æschin. c. Ctes. in Coll. Maj. iii, 76; on account of, by means of: παρὰ τί; on what account? Matth. Gr. Gram. s. 588. Παρά, with the acc., also signifies going side by side with; and hence, drawing support, assistance; οὐδὲ γὰρ οὗτος παρὰ τὴν αὑτοῦ ῥώμην τοσοῦτον ἐπηύξηται, ὅσον παρὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν ἀμέλειαν for he did not wax so great by means of his own strength, as by your negligence, i. e. his power increased, not by support from his own strength, but from your negligence, Demosth. 43, 15. In the oration, De Coron., we have these words: Πάνυ γὰρ παρὰ τοῦτο, (οὐχ ὁρᾷς;) γέγονε τὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων πράγματα, εἰ τοῦτ' τὸ ῥῆμα, ἀλλὰ μὴ τοῦτ' διελίχθην ἐγὼ, ἢ δεῦρ' τὴν χεῖρα, ἀλλὰ μὴ δεῦρ' παρήνεγκα, quite according to or in conformity with this.

V. In composition, παρὰ generally signifies beside, to the side of; sometimes to the farther side, beyond; παραχωρεῖν ὁδοῦ, to go aside from the direct path; sometimes it increases, and sometimes diminishes, the force of the simple word, and in some instances negatives or destroys its force.

Πάρα, for πάρεστι, or πάρεισιν, from πάρειμι, it is present with; οὔτε τὸ βούλεσθαι πάρα, I have not the inclination or will, Herodt. i, 42. It is doubtful if πάρα was ever used by the Attic tragedians and prose-writers for πάρεστι. There is only one example I know of, in Æschyl. Eum. 31; κεἰ πάρ' Ἑλλήνων τινές, but it is probable that the verb εἰσί is understood, and that παρά is the preposition. It occurs with the Epic poets, and Aristoph. Acharn. 862. Dunb.
